Team Culture

The Austin Stone Institute trains Christian leaders for the church, city, and nations. As a member of this team, we ask that you embody the following core cultural values:

- Servants of the Local Church: Although, by the grace of God, we will gain subject matter expertise, it is no substitute for faithful engagement in the ministry and mission of a local church. Our team will adopt a posture that loves, serves, and engages faithfully in the campuses of The Austin Stone and the various ministry needs that arise.
- Focused on the Strategic: While we will serve faithfully at a local expression of the church, one role of our team is to be proactive in identifying opportunities for ministry and anticipating problems that may arise in the future. Rather than be driven by the urgent and immediate needs of the present, we will give our present time to solving future problems so other teams can be freed for faithful ministry and mission in the present.
- Intentionally Thoughtful: Our team will seek to prayerfully and thoughtfully consider the opportunities and barriers of ministry from a variety of different angles. We will slow down and ask careful questions about the theological perspectives of The Austin Stone, about the cultural alignment of our ministry, and about potential implications of our work.
- Collaborative and Distinct: Our team will engage in the ministry and mission together, appreciating the various gifts, personalities, and communications styles that exist with individuals who make up the team.
- Joyfully Together: The Ministry Strategies Team will value, not only our professional relationship with one another, but cultivate familial relationships of joy, levity, and deep love and care for one another.
